Contributions invited for a Special Issue

Globalization, Education and Society

Guest Editor: Graham Butt

There will be a special issue of Educational Review on Globalization, Education and Society. We are hoping to have submissions from the UK, Australia, Canada and the USA as well as other developed and developing countries. We are looking for articles on a range of issues, including, but not limited to, the following:

- The impact of globalization on education, knowledge transfer and information flows
- The increasing educational divide between 'developed' and 'developing' nations, partly as a result of globalization
- The relationship between education and the state in a globalized world
- The effects of globalized 'policy borrowing' in education
- The impact of the global market in educational qualifications, particularly with respect to international competition and employment
- The greater social mobility of the 'educated few' in the globalized economy
- The impact of globalization on schooling, as nations strive for greater economic competitiveness
- The impact of globalization on educational policy and practice

Deadline for submission of papers is October 2008

Publication date February 2010

All submissions will be sent to two referees and an e-copy of the paper will be required. Details about submission style can be found on the inside back cover of Educational Review. Manuscripts should not exceed 5,000-6,500 words (although longer manuscripts will be considered). Papers must be written in English.
